outreach and retraumatization

- 00:00 The challenges of course they are there, especially like when we move up country, you find something when you are talking about the genocide, you know, there is a, the impact of the genocide has been on a large scale in Rwanda; so you see sometimes when you are talking about the genocide, when you are screening such documentaries, so sometimes they revive the memories of especially the survivors.
- 00:34 So, such a challenge has been, we have been coming across such a challenge but of course something which you have been doing for some time, we know how to address such challenges. Of course, we do explain to the people before about the film, and we explain to them, "Look, this one should not be a big problem for you," so you know.
- 01:07 And we try to explain to them that, "Look, such films are educative, you need to watch them and at least know the history of the tribunal, the history of the genocide." So at the end of the day, we find that such challenges can be coped up with.
